News Around Town

By Mrs. Calvin Robinson

I thought this a good one:

Two women had been lifelong friends in a small town but they had a falling out and for several months did not speak to each other. Finally a mutual friend who was grieved at the situation decided to do something about it. Soon the two friends were as chummy as before. The husband of the woman who had brought them together again was questioning her method one evening as they ate their dinner.

"However did you reconcile those two?" he asked.

"It was easy," smiled his wife. "I gave each one of them a choice bit of gossip and asked them not to repeat it to the other."

—Dan Bennett

Be sure and plan to attend the Hallow'en Party sponsored by the Woman's Club of Appomattox, which will be held at the Town Ball Park on Saturday night, October 30.

The Local Selective Service Board No. 8 will be closed the week of Nov. 8 through 12. Boys required to register that week are asked to please come in the following week.

Mrs. Joel W. Flood is in Roanoke today attending a meeting of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Western Area, which is being held at Hotel Roanoke. Mrs. Flood has recently been appointed one of the District Advisors.

The Appomattox Chapter, U. D. C. will meet tonight at 8:00 o'clock with Mrs. C. S. Jenkins.

Ladies Night will be observed by the Lions Club on Thursday night October 28.

Mrs. Pauline Clement Craig, of San Francisco, Calif., was a pleasant visitor in our office Monday. Mrs. Craig and Father Darkleaf reminisced about the older days when her father, the late A. H. Clement, was owner of The Times-Virginian. Mrs. Craig had not been back to Appomattox for quite a number of years. She remarked that the Times-Virginian office did not look the same without Mrs. Claude Smith at the desk in the front office. That is the job I am trying to fill at present.

Miss Rosa Mae Wooldridge and Mrs. Carter Martin will appear on WLVA - TV Friday, Oct. 22, at 12 noon. Friends and neighbors, be sure to tune in. This, I believe, will be Miss Wooldridge's second appearance on TV.

Saw quite a number of people from Appomattox and Spout Spring at the wrestling matches at City Armory in Lynchburg last Friday night. Have some more good bouts coming up this Friday night.

Don't forget the football game here Friday night. It will be Homecoming for the Blue Hornets. Let's come out and support the home team. They will play Brookville H. S. at the Town Ball Park 8 P. M.

Chick Chats

How about brooding a batch of chicks this fall instead of waiting until early next spring. It may sound foolish, but some poultry raisers are making good money with fall brooding.

Chicks started in October, November or December will come into production during March, April and May. By the time egg prices start to climb in June and July, these pullets will have produced their small eggs. Heaviest egg production will come during the late-summer and fall months — right at the time egg prices are highest.

Good flock management will keep these layers in production during the winter months. The birds finish 12 months of production in March, April or May and can then be sold at the time of high fowl prices.

Fall brooding works best with permanent brooder houses with plently of room since birds are raised in confinemetn. Permanent houses with centralized heating systems cost money to build but are actually cheaper to operate than conoly brooder houses.

Because all housing and equipment costs must be depreciated each year to get a true picture of poultry profit, fall brooding has another advantage — more birds can be raised with the same housing and equipment, thus lowering the "per bird" cost of depreciation. It helps to bring the poultry operation to full capacity.

Some poultrymen build a summer laying shelter for the older hens that are moved out of the laying house to make room for pullets started in the fall. This means that two flocks can be kept in production when egg prices are highest.

According to some poultrymen, fall chicks are easier to brood — probably because of less crowding and drier litter. Another advantage of fall brooding is that mash prices are usually less in the fall than in early spring.

The obvious disadvantage of fall brooding are costs of providing artificial heat for a long period of time, the absence of range rearing and the possibility of respiratory diseases.

Fall brooding is not advisable for all poultrymen but it does have a definite place in the poultry program. Fall brooding will afford extra profit for some pordducers.
